1. The latter went from a miniscule 3% of the economy in 1900 to reach a figure of 9% fifty years later, impressively tripling its total.
2. There was a period of further forward movement in light of the fact that S + had climbed to a not insubstantial 20% by 1975
3. That + S has made out exceptionally well is demonstrated by the 2000 figures, which show further progress to reach an appreciable plurality of 30%
4. There was a slight uptick from a virtual majority of 48% to just north of 50% fifty years later, which proceeded the sector's tanking (=decline) to a mere 10% in the ensuing 25 years.
5. The 1975 to 2000 period witnessed renewed declines to the negligible 3% level, underscoring the sector's dismal record.
6. The ... was one that fared only modestly better, with its contribution to the UK economy falling off modestly to 37% in the first fifty years prior to making further losses in the following years, ending up at an anemic 15%.
